NEW COMMUNITY SERVICE CENTERS FUNDED

The Office of Public Service Programs has obtained a grant from the United States Office of Education to develop community service centers to assist the hearing impaired in Philadelphia, Pa.; Charlotte, N.C.; and Richmond, Va.

The Public Service Programs has been administering a community service center in the District of Columbia to meet the personal and social needs of D.C. residents who are hearing impaired and have been traditionally frustrated in their dealings with public agencies.

Building on this experience and with the cooperation of three community colleges (the Community College of Philadelphia, Central Piedmont Community College in Charlotte, and the J. Sargeant Reynolds Community College, Richmond), these three new centers will provide multiple services to deaf and hard of hearing citizens in their respective communities.

Among the services performed are:

- providing special orientation to deafness workshops for public agency personnel
- providing sign language interpretation in continuing education classes
- informing deaf citizens of their local resources
- assisting deaf citizens in developing their own leadership skills.

Through these centers it is hoped that public agencies will be better able to provide services to deaf citizens on an equal basis.

AMONG OURSELVES

--Dan Pokorny has recently returned from a trip to East Germany where he met with church leaders working among the deaf. Known as the Ecumenical Working Group, these leaders are planning a training seminar in Washington after the World Federation of the Deaf meeting this summer. For details contact Dan.

--Welcome to Eric Bradshaw in Fiscal Services at Kendall and Harry Fields in Accounts Payable at the College.

--Diane Smith is now a full-time counselor with the Counseling Center. Diane previously worked with the Center's Special Services Program.

--Joseph Poirier has joined the Counseling Center as a part-time clinical psychologist.

--We stand corrected! Hartley Koch of the Counseling Center asked us to note that his daughter's name is Elizabeth Jane and not Elica Ann as previously printed. Our apologies and congratulations again.

REDUCED TICKET RATES

The Gallaudet College community is reminded that the Kennedy Center offers reduced ticket rates to students and handicapped persons. Students are required to show a valid identification card when purchasing tickets.

To qualify as a hearing impaired adult, please see Abby Gaudrey on the second floor of the Kennedy Center for an identification card.

This special program is offered for most performances. For more information call 254-3718.
